

Outdoor play fosters children's intellectual, emotional, social and physical development. And by being outside and surrounded by nature, children experience an ever-changing and free-flowing environment that stimulates all the senses. Being outdoors, engaging and discovering new things about the world around us not only supports and promotes all seven areas of the EYFS but also supports the holistic development of a child; nurturing their health and wellbeing. The more children can actively learn and critically think while in the outdoors the wider the scope of learning and development.

So why not go on a nature Hunt? What can you find?
